

Press Release

June 08, 2009

RegisterPatient.com Becomes Synogen's Newest Portfolio Company

RegisterPatient.com, an efficient on-line communications system between patients and healthcare providers, is pleased to announce its partnership with Synogen as its newest portfolio company.

RegisterPatient.com ensures that patients register prior to their first office visit and integrates the information smoothly with virtually all electronic medical record (EMR) systems. Fully compliant with all HIPAA and HL7 regulations, RegisterPatient.com provides personal health information compatibly across all healthcare providers saving personnel time and eliminating office schedule delays.

The idea originates from David Williams, founder and registered nurse of 16 years. Williams recognized the inefficiencies related to patient registration, patient referrals, and understands the Internet's practical applications.

"The Internet and RegisterPatient.com brings a pencil-and-paper process to the twenty-first century. By registering online once, the patient can give his or her information to multiple healthcare providers at a single moment. It had to happen sometime," said Williams.

Indeed, current federal policy mandates Healthcare Providers to use Electronic Medical Records (EMR) for most Americans by the year 2014. It is logical to start the process electronically from the beginning of the encounter.

Williams conceived the on-line registration and EMR integration systems idea four years ago and has continually developed it. RegisterPatient.com recently launched its new comprehensive website providing all the company's services.

Synogen sees the growing opportunity for digitized medical records and the unique niche RegisterPatient.com serves, and is excited to welcome the new portfolio company.

"Currently, no common system exists for patients to provide their registration information in advance of their visit to the hospital or healthcare provider, and no system integrates that information into all the different types of electronic medical records the healthcare providers are currently using," says Synogen Executive Director Richard Allen. "RegisterPatient.com will provide great benefits to both the patient and healthcare provider, making the registration process quick, easy, and effective for the patient. We are excited about partnering with RegisterPatient.com and look forward to being part of their growth and success."

About RegisterPatient.com

RegisterPatient.com is an innovative and efficient on-line communications system between patients and healthcare providers. Using the web-based service, RegisterPatient.com integrates registration information smoothly with electronic medical record systems saving personnel time and unnecessary paper, and allows patients to complete medical forms from their homes. RegisterPatient.com complies with all HIPAA and HL7 standards.

About Synogen

Synogen is a private equity medical technology venture fund that partners in the creation of medical technology companies. Synogen assists its portfolio companies by providing key elements that are critical to their success, from strategic planning, market research and branding to product development, patent and regulatory expertise. Synogen has a proven ability to help its portfolio companies bring technologies to market rapidly, gain regulatory approval where needed, tackle operational challenges and rapidly produce profitable operations.